

WAVE SCORES

WHAT IS A WAVE SCORE

When you play The Guide on MemoryBeach, you receive a score. When people score like you did, they find they can remember certain things better than others. How you remember determines your wave. These Waves reflect how much effort it might take to remember something. Read more below.

LIGHT WAVE

People in the Light Wave remember things that are simple. We typically call them one or two-step commands. For example, you might remember how to use your cell phone by waking it up, tapping on an app icon, and then making a call. This is a simple, light activity, and most people can remember it.

EXCITING WAVE

Those who find themselves in the Exciting Wave category can do all the things at the Light Wave level, and more. Activities in the Exciting Wave require a little more effort to practice and to remember, typically because people in this group like challenges. You might like to read instructions to set something up and are willing to read them more than once. People in the Exciting Wave are often drawn to new challenges just within their reach.

EPIC WAVE

Those who find themselves in the Epic Wave group seek out activities with more than 4 steps and can quickly remember those sequences. For example, they might be good at looking at a complex set of directions, categorizing them quickly, and then taking on a new activity. People in the Epic Wave are good at figuring out and fixing things, addressing complex problems as they surface, and finding their ways around new things, such as a new town.

VACATION WAVE

Most people agree that sometimes in life, you want things to feel easy. If you've scored in the Vacation Wave, you do your best when you have just one thing to remember, and you like to remember that one thing well. We use the Vacation Wave category to describe everyone who wishes for a little break from having to remember a complex routine, or details greater than 1 item.

WAVE SYMBOLS

Light

These products have certain features that make them easy to remember between uses.

Example: Writing in a journal every day and remembering where your pen and journal are, and what you'd like to write about.

WAVE LEVEL

Epic

These products need set up, passwords, or other support. Example: Setting up a home security system, connected through your Internet router, and solving problems using what you have just learned.

WAVE LEVEL

Exciting

These products require more effort, for more payoff! Example: Learning how to make a favorite meal and remembering how to improve it.

VACATION

Vacation

No matter what Wave interests you, the Vacation Wave is always easy. Example: Remembering where you put your keys, by hanging them up in the same place by the door every time.

memorybeach

Wave Score Defined

A MemoryBeach Wave Score helps you figure out how your memory works, and to connect that Wave Category to products, services and other solutions best matched to your current memory skills.

WAVE SCORE PRODUCT MENU

EXAMPLES OF PRODUCTS BY WAVE SCORE

Those who score in a Wave Category can enjoy all the products, but will find those products matched to their memory systems the easiest to remember how to use. A few examples are below.

LIGHT WAVE

Reliable phone & lighting devices that keep these essential devices charged with built-in back ups if you're not near power

Using electronic key & small item location systems

EXCITING WAVE

Playing card games with special, relevant designs to encourage playing, which reinforces card game rules to remember

Setting up and maintaining pill reminder systems for home and travel

EPIC WAVE

Setting up a smart home devices such as security systems, or a Google Home, Amazon Alexa, or similar Internet-Of-Things device, and connecting that device with your home Internet provider and securing your account

VACATION WAVE

Backpacks with special protecting pockets that "remind" you where to put valuable items (to avoid credit card swiping theft)

Drinking cups made from silicone that collapse, with handy pill compartments built into them!

©2020 MemoryBeach Company

